Personality disorders are usually recognizable by adolescence or earlier, continue throughout adulthood, and become less obvious in middle age.